To make an apology is to say that we feel sorry for a mistake that we have made. Generally speaking, people should not apologize and offer excuses for themselves at the same time. In principle, an apology is a statement that admits that we were wrong and that now we want to accept responsibility for the trouble or inconvenience we have caused.

Cooper feels badly about the rain that disturbed the photo session and caused Nana to get wet, but Nana is right to correct him. By saying “It’s not your fault,” she is telling Cooper not to feel that he has to be in control of the weather. In other words, the raindrops, in Nana’s opinion, are not Cooper’s responsibility.
